

Sugar Glider

(Petaurus breviceps)

Status: Least concern, population stable

Habitat: Woodlands and open forests

Description: The Sugar Glider is a small marsupial with soft, thick, mink-like, gray fur that covers its body and tail. A black stripe runs the full length of the body in line with the spine and crown of the head. The tip of the tail is black.

Adults can weigh around 114-171 grams, males often larger.